Treasury Laws Amendment (Prohibiting Energy Market Misconduct) Bill 2019

The Australian Energy Council (the "AEC") welcomes the opportunity to make a submission to the Senate Economics Legislation Committee (the "Committee") on the Treasury Laws Amendment (Prohibiting Energy Market Misconduct) Bill 2019 ("the 2019 Bill").

The AEC is the industry body representing 22 electricity and downstream natural gas businesses operating in the competitive wholesale and retail energy markets. These businesses collectively generate the overwhelming majority of electricity in Australia and sell gas and electricity to over 10 million homes and businesses.

The AEC also made a submission to this Committee's Inquiry regarding the 2018 iteration of this Bill. This submission highlighted that the 2018 Bill contained unprecedented sector specific market interventions, that would increase risks for would be investors, and likely result in higher electricity prices for consumers. The AEC position on these issues has not changed, but noting the Government's continued efforts to progress this Bill, this submission focuses on critical amendments necessary to ensure the 2019 Bill, if passed, does not unnecessarily damage the competitive market to the detriment of consumers.

During the 2018 Committee Inquiry, no evidence was presented by the Government regarding the need or likely efficacy of the provisions in the Bill. Similarly, the overwhelming majority of stakeholders submitted, both in writing and at hearings held on 5 and 6 February 2019, that the Bill was unwarranted and counterproductive. Specifically, noted experts such as Professor Ian Harper, co-author of the Australian Government's 2015 Competition Policy Review (the Harper Review), and the Law Council of Australia, stated unequivocally that the drafting of the 2018 Bill would diminish the efficacy of the economy wide Competition and Consumer Act (CCA).

The 2019 Bill has not been redrafted to address stakeholder concerns. The Bill before this Committee is largely the same as the Bill that was introduced into Parliament prior to the election.

Competition Laws, such as the CCA, must tread a careful balance. The authors of the Harper Review asked four questions when considering whether competition laws were fit for purpose.

- Does the law focus on enhancing consumer wellbeing over the long term?
- Does the law protect competition rather than individual competitors?
- Does the law strike the right balance between prohibiting anti-competitive conduct and not interfering with efficiency, innovation and entrepreneurship?
- Is the law as clear, simple and predictable as it can be?

The AEC position is that these four questions should be considered by the Committee in this Inquiry.

Development of the 2019 Bill

Following the election, the AEC and its members sought to work with the Government to ensure that the Bill when re-introduced was workable, clear, and did not diminish the efficiency and operation of electricity businesses, in turn resulting in higher prices for consumers. Substantial efforts were undertaken to highlight the types of changes which would mitigate against these undesirable impacts. These suggested amendments were not to repeal large swathes of the Bill, but rather to align it where possible to existing laws, and to take into account changes in the market structure since the 2018 Bill was withdrawn from Parliament. We attach a copy of these suggested amendments in Appendix A.

It was the AEC's view that if the Bill was to be progressed, it should be progressed in a manner that mitigated the risks highlighted in the previous Inquiry. Despite the availability of reasonable and logical amendments, the Government has only made a small number of changes largely immaterial to its operation, preferring to focus on the procedural requirements in the Bill.

A number of these procedural amendments are supported, but they will not mitigate the significant risks this Bill creates. The weight of evidence presented by credible experts that this Bill would have unintended and undesirable consequences has been ignored. The Committee should consider and support amendments to the Bill which would mitigate against its plausible economic consequences.

Amendments made to the 2018 Bill

Substantive amendments

The 2019 Bill provides for a 6 month transitional period from the date of Royal Assent. This is an important change. The 2018 Bill would have applied the day it received Royal Assent, prior to the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (the 'ACCC') developing and publishing its compliance guidelines. Given the lack of clarity in drafting, and the substantial powers provided to the ACCC by this Bill, the AEC strongly supports the inclusion of a transitional period. That being said, the AEC is concerned that the Government has not included any reference in the Bill to the ACCC developing compliance guidelines nor the timeframes required to develop them. It would be more appropriate to provide industry a transition period post completion of these guidelines, or, to require the ACCC to publish completed guidelines within 3 months. A transitional period of this nature would ameliorate the risk of ACCC guidelines not being finalised until near to, or after, the implementation date.

The 2019 Bill also includes the so-called 'Katter Amendment', which the Government advises in the Explanatory Memorandum ensures that Government-owned assets cannot be privatised by divestment. Despite fundamentally opposing divestment, the AEC considers this amendment improves the 2018 Bill, ensuring that Government-owned assets cannot be forcibly privatised. That being said, the amendment as currently drafted would effectively allow the Federal Government to re-organise the ownership structure of energy assets owned by a State Government. This is a concern, and may result in existing plant becoming inoperable, or uncommercial, post divestiture. Ultimately, as with all divestiture, the net public benefit test is unlikely to be achieved.

Procedural amendments

The 2019 Bill limits the application of the retail prohibition in s153E to market offers. Given the Government regulates the price of standing offers, this does not substantively amend the application of the Bill as it would be very unlikely that action would be taken against an offer that has been set by the regulator.

P +61 3 9205 3100 E info@energycouncil.com.au W energycouncil.com.au ABN 926 084 953 07 ©Australian Energy Council 2018 All rights reserved. The 2019 Bill limits individual liability to senior executives, avoiding concerns raised that the 2018 Bill may have captured relatively junior staff members.

The 2019 Bill no longer requires the Treasurer to publish details of contracting orders made under s153X. This amendment is welcomed. The 2018 Bill required the Treasurer to publish information that could clearly be categorised as commercially sensitive.

Minor drafting amendments

There are some additional minor amendments that have been made which intend to rectify errors in the drafting of the 2018 Bill. These amendments are not notable and have no material impact on the application of the 2019 Bill.

Key amendments sought by Industry

As noted above, the AEC undertook extensive effort to attempt to clarify the Government's intent regarding the Bill's application, and proposed amendments that would achieve this intention without unnecessarily damaging the operation of the electricity market.

The attached Appendix B sets out in detail, the nature of the amendments industry considered would enhance the Bill, significantly decreasing the likelihood of unintended consequences. These proposed amendments remain relevant and necessary following the introduction of the 2019 Bill.

The industry continues to advocate for the following critical amendments:

Retail Prohibition – section 153E

Section 153E requires a retailer to make reasonable adjustments to the price of its offers if there is a substantial and sustained reduction in the cost of procuring energy.

Since the drafting of the 2018 Bill, there has been a fundamental shift in the structure of the retail regulatory framework. Previously, retail pricing had been de-regulated. In 2019, the market was re-regulated, capping the price for customers who were unwilling or unable to engage in the competitive market.

Section 153E was amended to exclude regulated standing offers in NSW, South East Queensland, and South Australia, but the amendment has been drafted in a manner that results in regulated standing offers in Victoria remaining captured by the provision. This is an error of drafting and must be amended.

The application of s153E in a regulated price market is challenging. Retailers are permitted to price offers at the regulated price, but are required, if the offer is a market offer, to adjust that offer if there is a substantial and sustained decrease in procurement costs. The presence of duplicative pricing regulations is sub-optimal, and was not recommended by the ACCC. There has never been any suggestion in any Government report that available market offers are not priced efficiently. Practically, s153E, as drafted, may require retailers to reprice their competitive market offers more frequently than they otherwise would have. Prices may need to more closely reflect highly dynamic input cost cycles, and this may operate to require more regular price changes (both up and down) in order to ensure that if challenged by the ACCC, retailers are able to prove they have adjusted their pricing appropriately.

Duplicative pricing regulation is unlikely to deliver positive outcomes for electricity consumers. But, if this provision is to remain, there are a number of alternative approaches that the Government could take to ensure s153E is able to be complied with, whilst maintaining a positive customer experience.

P +61 3 9205 3100 E info@energycouncil.com.au W energycouncil.com.au ABN 926 084 953 07 ©Australian Energy Council 2018 All rights reserved. The Bill, as currently drafted, is unclear as to when costs should be considered 'reduced'. This appears to be a definitional issue. Whilst the Bill refers to reductions in a retailers procurement costs (that is, the costs actually incurred by a retailer), the EM describes cost reductions as reductions in market costs (that is, impacting retailers generally). This disconnect creates confusion, and will make enforcement difficult. The AEC considers that the Bill should be amended to refer only to reductions in market costs as described in the EM. Requiring retailers to pass through reductions in costs incurred will discourage innovation and investment in reducing actual costs. This outcome would not be in the interests of consumers.

Further, the EM states that this provision is not intended to capture short term, or insubstantial declines in procurement costs. The question remains though, as to what is short term, and what is insubstantial. Practically, retailers usually adjust their market offer prices once per year. This ensures that customers are better able to predict their energy costs, limiting price volatility and bill shock. At the same time, the retailer manages their risks and costs over the year. The new offers they make to customers take these risks and costs into account.

Section 153E appears to limit current practice. If procurement costs fall during the year, the drafting suggests that a price change may be required. We do not consider that would reflect the intent of the provision, nor deliver good customer outcomes. It would be preferable to require retailers to take into account reductions in cost annually, in line with standard price cycles, and provide greater clarity to retailers as to what constitutes a substantial and sustained decrease in costs.

Contracting Prohibition – Section 153F

Section 153F has been drafted in a manner that closely resembles the Misuse of Market Power provisions in s46(1) of the CCA. These provisions are drafted as follows:

46(1) Misuse of Market Power

A corporation that has a substantial degree of power in a market must not engage in conduct that has the purpose, or has or is likely to have the effect, of substantially lessening competition in: (a) that market; or

(a) that market, of (b) any other market in which that cor

(b) any other market in which that corporation, or a body corporate that is related to that corporation:

(i) supplies goods or services, or is likely to supply goods or services; or

(ii) supplies goods or services, or is likely to supply goods or services, indirectly through one or more other persons; or

(c) any other market in which that corporation, or a body corporate that is related to that corporation:

(i) acquires goods or services, or is likely to acquire goods or services; or(ii) acquires goods or services, or is likely to acquire goods or services, indirectly through one or more other persons.

P +61 3 9205 3100 E info@energycouncil.com.au W energycouncil.com.au Section 153F is drafted in a manner that appears to have a similar effect.

| 15 | 3F Prohibited conduct—electricity financial contract liquidity |
|----|---|
| | A corporation contravenes this section if: |
| | (a) any of the following conditions are satisfied: |
| | (i) the corporation generates electricity; |
| | (ii) a body corporate that is related to the corporation generates electricity; and |
| | (b) the corporation does any of the following: |
| | (i) fails to offer electricity financial contracts; |
| | (ii) limits or restricts its offers to enter into electricity financial contracts; |
| | (iii) offers to enter into electricity financial contracts in a way that has, or on terms th have, the effect or likely effect of preventing, limiting or restricting acceptance of those offers; and |
| | (c) the corporation does so for the purpose of substantially lessening competition in any electricity market. |

The AEC remains of the view that substantial risks arise from implementing duplicative, sector specific regulations, stated by the Government as mitigating conduct already prohibited in the Competition Laws. Given section 46 of the CCA has only recently been amended, the inclusion of energy specific obligations creates practical compliance challenges. Previous guidance around section 46 will no longer be applicable, creating additional uncertainty around whether it and the new section 153F can operate concurrently.

The Government has not provided any evidence that the existing provisions in s46 are inadequate to protect consumers against the type of conduct described in the EM.

It appears that the duplicate prohibition has been developed as a means to implement a sector specific penalty – the contracting order power in s153X. If this is the case, we urge the Committee to recommend that the duplicate provision be removed, and instead, recommend the remedy in s153X (amended as suggested below) be added to the potential remedies for a breach of s46.

Bidding Prohibition – Section 153G and 153H

Sections 153G and 153H prohibit generators from bidding, or failing to bid, fraudulently, dishonestly or in bad faith, and/or does so for the purpose of distorting or manipulating prices in the electricity spot market.

This concept, whilst expanded to include failing to bid, is similar to existing obligations in the National Electricity Rules. Rule 3.8.22A requires that all bids, offers, or rebids are not false or misleading. Given the concept is aligned, the AEC considers it would be preferable to align the drafting of s153G and 153H to that in rule 3.8.22Å, with the expanded capture. Additionally, it must be made clear that any conduct found to breach the bidding prohibitions must be contrary to the spot market design.

It is important to note that the Australian Energy Market Commission removed the concept of good faith from the National Electricity Rules in 2015 because it was unable to be determined by the Courts. Given the previous failings of this terminology, it is concerning that the Government intends to re-introduce the concept through this Bill, particularly given the availability of the Government's own expert rule-maker's improved drafting.

Aligning 153G and 153H to the drafting of 3.8.22A would not in any way diminish the ability for the ACCC to determine liability of an electricity business for the type of conduct the Government considers should be avoided.

The AEC reiterates that the ACCC did not find any specific instances of misconduct by electricity businesses in its comprehensive Retail Electricity Pricing Inquiry, rather highlighting that stronger laws should be implemented proactively to avoid any risk. The AEC is not opposed to clear and justified obligations on electricity businesses, but cannot support the poorly drafted provisions of this Bill.

Contracting Orders – Section 153X

Section 153X delivers the Treasurer the extraordinary power to issue a contracting order. A contracting order would require an electricity business to offer financial contracts to any party on terms, price, and volume determined unfettered by the Treasurer. Further, the standards of proof required prior to making such an order are alarmingly low. The ACCC would only need to hold a 'belief' that the electricity business has engaged in the prohibited conduct. The Treasurer would then need only be 'satisfied' that a breach has occurred, without any judicial process or finding.

This is a serious and ill-considered incursion into the operation of private enterprises in the Australian economy, and one premised on a process that does not afford procedural fairness.

There is a real risk that this power will be politicised. The AEC maintains that a contracting order should only be determined by the Federal Court, in line with the application of the Divestment Order power in s153ZX. No Treasurer could be expected to have the necessary expertise to make a determination of breach or an order of this nature, effectively requiring a detailed understanding of the role of an energy trader – determining available capacity, market price, and timeframes necessary to ensure an Order does not result in the generator becoming insolvent, or force them to breach other contractual obligations.

It is critical that section 153X is amended. The AEC considers that the Treasurer, with guidance from the Australian Energy Regulator, should be required to apply to the Court with a proposed contracting order. The Court must then determine whether it is satisfied that the conditions for making the contracting order, including the contravention of s153F or s153H, have been met. To mitigate any risk of unintended consequence as a result of a contracting order, the Court should also be required to consider evidence from the electricity business about the impact of the Treasurer's proposed contracting order.

There are also potential constitutional issues with s153X as drafted. As noted by Ashurst in Appendix C:

"placing this power in the hands of the Treasurer may not be appropriate, particularly to the extent to which this might be characterised as a form of judicial power. In the context of these reforms, it gives the Treasurer the power to punish a business by fundamentally changing the structure and commercial arrangements of that business."

Conclusion

The introduction of sector specific prohibitions into the CCA is undesirable and not justified by existing market outcomes. If not undertaken carefully, following thorough investigation into the appropriateness, effectiveness, and targeting of the new laws, the negative consequences could be dramatic. The Government in developing this Bill has not provided stakeholders with any evidence that these reforms will deliver positive outcomes for consumers.

• Does the law focus on enhancing consumer wellbeing over the long term?

The Government states this to be the case, however provides no evidence that the prohibitions, and remedies they afford, have been drafted to avoid any specific negative outcomes. The Bill instead suggests it will enhance consumer wellbeing because of the mere presence of punitive laws.

• Does the law protect competition rather than individual competitors?

The Bill as drafted is unclear in its application. Whilst it would apply sector wide, Government rhetoric suggests that it is in fact intended to largely impact large electricity businesses, for the protection of smaller businesses.

• Does the law strike the right balance between prohibiting anti-competitive conduct and not interfering with efficiency, innovation and entrepreneurship?

This assessment has not been undertaken. The Government drafted the 2018 Bill in a compressed timeframe, and as noted above has only made cursory amendments to the 2019 Bill following an informal consultation. There remain significant risks that implementing broad, vague, and sector specific powers will result in over capture.

• Is the law as clear, simple and predictable as it can be?

Submissions to the Committee Inquiry into the 2018 Bill were overwhelming in their conclusions. The weight of evidence presented was to the effect that this Bill has not been carefully drafted to mitigate unintended consequences, but rather the opposite. It provides near identical prohibitions to existing legislation, without any evidence provided as to why these obligations are inadequate. They are unpredictable, requiring numerous examples to attempt to clarify the types of conduct deemed prohibited. These examples continue to highlight conduct not found in the market, or already prohibited by existing laws.

Further, the fact that these recommendations, in particular the power to divest assets, were expressly considered by both the ACCC and the Harper Review, and rejected as unhelpful, should be a matter of grave concern.

The Government must amend this Bill. Without amendment, the so-called 'Big Stick' will not reduce energy prices, or benefit consumers in any way.

The AEC would welcome the opportunity to appear before the Committee, to highlight the genuine and continuing concerns of our members regarding the Bill.

| Subdivision A— Public W warning notices | |
| 153L Commission may give draft publicconfidential warning notice | Commented [A24]: This amendment is proposed as a result of amending section 153M. |
| The Commission may give a corporation a notice in writing if the Commission reasonably believes satisfied on reasonable grounds that: (a) any of the following conditions are satisfied: (i) the corporation has engaged in prohibited conduct; (ii) the corporation is engaging in prohibited conduct; and (b) one or more persons has suffered, or is likely to suffer, detriment as a result of the prohibited conduct; and (c) it is in the public interest to issue the notice. The notice must: (a) state the day on which the notice is given; and (b) identify: | These power to issue public warning notices are not well suited to dealing with these types of prohibitions, as they require detailed analysis in order to determine whether there has been a contravention. They are more suited where there is a sense of urgency that the public must be made aware of a matter in order to avoid harm. The ACCC should not have the power to issue any warning notices on a public basis, particularly without the contraventions having been established/proved. Accordingly, this should be a confidential process. The broad power for the ACCC to issue a public warning notice could have very severe impact on retailers, particularly in circumstances where the contravention does not even have to be proved. For example, even if the ACCC or Court determines that the corporation has not engaged in prohibited conduct after the ACCC has issued a public warning notices. |

This is a significant power that would require the Treasurer to take the position of an electricity financial contract trader in order to apply, particularly in relation to a dynamic market. We are concerned about the unbounded nature of this power. There is a material risk that, used inappropriately, the power could cause significant detriment to the firm and distort the market. We are also concerned that placing this power in the hands of the Treasurer may not be appropriate, particularly to the extent to which this might be characterised as a form of judicial power. In the context of these reforms, it gives the Treasurer the power to punish a business by fundamentally changing the structure and commercial arrangements of that business. |

MEMORANDUM

1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- 1.1 This document sets out our proposed amendments to the Treasury Laws Amendment (Prohibiting Energy Market Misconduct) Bill 2018 (Bill), prepared for the Australian Energy Council (AEC).
- 1.2 In summary, our view is that:
 - (a) the proposed obligation to reduce prices in response to reductions in the underlying cost of procuring electricity is not necessary and is inconsistent with the new pricing approach established by the default market offer obligations in the Competition and Consumer (Industry Code – Electricity Retail) Regulations 2019 (DMO Code) and the equivalent Order under section 13 of the Electricity Industry Act 2000 regulating tariffs for the sale of electricity to prescribed customers published by the Victorian Government on 30 May 2019 (VDO Code), together with the extensive existing regulatory obligations under the National Energy Retail Law regime and equivalent Energy Retail Code;
 - (b) the proposed wholesale bids and financial electricity contract misconduct prohibitions regulate conduct that is already regulated by the bidding requirements in the National Electricity Rules and prohibition against misuse of market power in the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth) (CCA);
 - (c) the proposed prohibitions are otherwise cast so broadly that there will be significant uncertainty over the extent to which legitimate operational decisions and conduct can be properly distinguished from illegal conduct, which may make the prohibitions difficult to interpret, apply and enforce; and
 - (d) the very serious enforcement consequences need to be proportionate to the misconduct. We have suggested amendments in the table below to ensure, to the extent possible, that this is the case.

2. TABLE OF PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

The following table sets out the key proposed amendments to the Bill, in order of significance. Other proposed amendments are set out in the Annexure.

| # | Торіс | Issue | Proposed amendments |
|---|---|--|---|
| 1 | Prohibited conduct – retail pricing Section 153E, in effect, requires retailers to "make reasonable adjustments to the price of [offers to supply electricity to small customers], or to the price of those supplies, to reflect sustained and substantial reductions in its underlying cost of procuring electricity". | This prohibition implements a form of price regulation and goes significantly further than the issue set out in the Explanatory Memorandum which states that it is to address customer confusion and ability to identify better offers (paragraphs 8.5 to 8.14 of the Explanatory Memorandum). | Section 153E should be entirely removed, and the efficacy of the DMO Code and VDO Order should be reviewed before any more intrusive regulation is implemented. |
| | | The new regulatory requirements under the DMO and VDO (which took effect on 1 July 2019) address the issues of customer confusion and the ability to identify better offers, by establishing both a reference price for easier comparisons, and a regulated default offer. | If section 153E was retained despite the concerns that introducing it now is premature, amendments would be required to be workable. These would include amendments to: |
| | | adjustments" to market prices and unless amendments are made | clarify what a "sustained and substantial reduction" in the underling cost of procuring electricity would constitute—in the |
| | | This provision would also be difficult to interpret and apply. This is particularly true given this provision is inconsistent with existing obligations under the DMO and VDO and other price regulation regimes in other jurisdictions. Accordingly, there will be considerable difficulty in applying this regime in combination with these other obligations. The changes are potentially premature in circumstances where the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) will continue to monitor retail pricing as part of its seven year electricity review. In the event the ACCC concludes | interests of compliance and effective enforcement, this should be an objective test based on the benchmark costs of a prudent and efficient standalone new entrant retailer. This is consistent with the intention expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum, for example, see paragraph 2.28; |
| | | that the DMO and VDO do not achieve their identified purpose, then further regulation could be considered at that time. Electricity prices are set on the basis of the forecast costs of procuring electricity, hedging that risk, and recovering operational costs and overheads, generally a year in advance. Those costs are | clarify that the wholesale energy cost component should be assessed with reference to a range of commercially legitimate risk management strategies and |

| # | Topic | significantly affected by a retailer's forecast demand. Demand is driven both by customer retention and acquisition, and customer use, which is in turn affected by a range of external factors, particularly the weather. Consequently, each retailer must make a risk-based decision about prices based on these uncertain forecasts. The retailer will then adjust its market prices in the course of the year in response to competition and changes in forecasts. The proposed provisions increase the risk to retailers by requiring them to make reasonable adjustments (ie reductions) in response to reductions in underlying costs. However, determining whether the underlying costs of procuring electricity have reduced for a retailer is difficult, as it will be based both on actual costs, and forecast costs. For example, a temporary reduction in spot market prices, even over several weeks, will not necessarily mean a reduction in forecast costs, particularly if it is in response to a particular event (eg summer temperatures being lower than expected). On the other hand, costs may increase rapidly (eg winter temperatures being lower than expected). Further, hedging costs are less easily forecast, and are likely to differ between retailers. Even if the underlying costs of procurement can be identified, the assessment of whether an individual retailer has made a "reasonable adjustment" is difficult, particularly where the majority of retailers offer a range of different prices on different plans (in addition to a default offer). For example, if a retailer has decided to take an aggressive price position on a plan with a limited margin, | observable forward market prices; clarify that "reasonable adjustments" allow a retailer to take into account retailer-specific factors, including margin, changes in other costs, the need to "smooth out" price changes, the timing of past and future price changes; introduce a "materiality" threshold so that "sustained" and "substantial" can be easily identified and applied, both for retailers and the ACCC; ensure that default offers made in accordance with the DMO, VDO or any other legislation is exempt (particularly given that retailers may legitimately choose to price at the default offer level); and clarify that the underlying costs of procuring electricity is a forward looking, not backward looking, assessment to reflect industry practice. |
| | | does this prohibition require it to reduce the price in line with that limited margin, or can it choose to maintain the price to recover other costs? Do the words "reasonable adjustments" allow it to recover other rising costs, such as increased retail costs? These matters are addressed in broad terms in the Explanatory Memorandum, but not the legislative provision. | ACCC could just rely on the AER's setting of the DMO. |

| # | Торіс | Issue | Proposed amendments |
|---|---|--|---|
| | | These factors will make the provision difficult to comply with, and difficult for the ACCC to enforce. | |
| 2 | Divestiture order Section 153ZA empowers the Treasurer to apply to the Court for a divestiture order. | This is a significant power that allows, as a punitive measure, the court to break up an established business that has properly and lawfully acquired assets in response to breaches of a provision that may be enforced through significant, but less intrusive, means (including pecuniary penalties and injunctive orders). The effect of a divestment order would be significant and could leave the divested assets commercially unviable. As Rod Sims cautioned during a Senate Estimates Hearing in October 2018, " divestiture is such an extreme step that we felt judgment would be very hard to reach ". This echoes concerns raised by the Harper Panel: " divestiture is likely to have broader impacts on the firm's general efficiency " (Harper Review Final Report, page 346). While Australian legislation includes divestiture orders under the section 69 of the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1976 (Cth) or section 81 of the CCA (and predecessor legislation), these orders apply where a corporation has, in effect, proceeded with a transaction that it should not have proceeded with. This is fundamentally different to a situation where a corporation has legitimately acquired assets, but is required to divest them as a result of subsequent conduct. Foreign legislation does contain divestiture laws but foreign laws are generally broad-based laws directed to correcting a misuse or abuse of market power or monopolisation (eg Canada, the European Union, the United States of America) or anti-competitive conduct that cannot be remedied through less intrusive means (United Kingdom). By contrast, the proposed laws are focussed on a specific industry (the energy industry) and specific conduct (bidding) that does not involve a misuse of market power or anti-competitive conduct. | The divestiture order powers should be removed entirely. If, despite the significant risks, a divestiture order were introduced, a range of amendments should be implemented to ensure procedural fairness and clear criteria, recognising that court-order divestiture be used "as a last resort in the most exceptional circumstances where other responseswould not sufficiently address the alleged prohibited conduct" (paragraph 5.7 of the Explanatory Memorandum – see also paragraphs 8.53 and 8.92). This should include amendments to: allow a court to impose a less intrusive order (such as requiring functional separation or ringfencing, pecuniary penalties, or injunctions) instead of proceeding directly to divestiture where it considers divestiture is not proportionate; the period for selling an asset should not be limited to 12 months, but should instead be assessed by the court on the evidence; the purchaser should be required to operate the generation plant; there should be a mechanism for revoking the order where there is |

| | | | no buyer for fair value; andthe impact on the corporation should be taken into account. |
| 3 | Prohibited conduct – financial contract market Section 153F effectively prohibits generators from refusing to offer electricity financial contracts for the purpose of substantially lessening competition in any electricity market. | The conduct regulated by section 153F is similar to a misuse of market power, which is already regulated by section 46 of the CCA. However, the provision removes any requirement to identify substantial market power. The framing of the provision as currently drafted is uncertain, and could be construed as having a broader interpretation than is suggested in the Explanatory Memorandum. We therefore suggest incorporating the limitations currently suggested in the Explanatory Memorandum into the provisions, and including provisions that make clear this section does not operate to require contracting off units that have been legitimately notified for mothballing or closure, and will not operate in a manner that interferes with legitimate operational concerns in respect of assets, such as reliability, maintenance requirements and safe operation. We also understand that the purpose of this prohibition is to ensure that retailers seek financial contracts to hedge risk in supplying small customers, and not more broadly. This is not reflected in the drafting. | Section 153F as currently drafted could be construed as having a very broad application, which is clearly not intended particularly taking into account paragraph 2.49 of the Explanatory Memorandum. It is preferable that section 153F be removed and, instead, a misuse of market power contrary to section 46 be subject to the contracting order remedy (as amended), discussed below. If it is retained, it should also be limited to electricity financial contracts offered to third party retailers supplying small customers. In particular, the following conduct should not constitute a breach: conduct that would require a generator to breach an existing contract or compromise the ability to meet those requirements; a failure to offer contracts where there are physical or regulatory limitations in doing so; where conduct is to comply with legislation (including market liquidity or retailer reliability obligations); |

| | | | conduct to give effect to genuine risk strategies (including counterparty risk), maintenance and outage planning and management, or managing safety; or |
| | | | where the conduct is to manage a vertically-integrated generator/retailer's own risk position. |
| | | | In addition, we recommend the insertion of a paragraph which makes clear that the provision does not require corporations to contract units that are mothballed or closed, or otherwise do anything that raises legitimate operational or safety concerns. |

| | | The market design is premised on individual participants making interval-by-interval decisions based on a host of factors, while properly pursuing the commercial objective to achieve an economic return over the longer term. Accordingly, it must be made clear that these prohibitions are not intended to prohibit bidding conduct that is consistent with market design and the necessity for higher prices at a time of tight supply and demand as a signal for further market investment. The prohibitions may be difficult to interpret and enforce, with the potential for considerable argument about the measures of these words, particularly when coupled with a very considerable and invasive remedy, such as a divestment order. The introduction of provisions that are not conducive to a clear understanding of what constitutes compliant conduct are particularly concerning. The existing regulation of dispatch offers and bids in Chapter 3 of the National Electricity Rules already captures a broad range of conduct. For example, rule 3.8.22A(a) prohibits making an offer, bid or rebid that is false, misleading or likely to mislead. An offer or bid made fraudulently, dishonestly or in bad faith will be prohibited under this existing rule. | and that they are made with the purpose of distorting or manipulating prices in the electricity spot market, taking into account the design of the electricity spot market—ie they are not intended to change the design and operation of the electricity spot markets; and both prohibitions should be limited to the National Electricity Market and should incorporate the language of paragraph 2.101 from the Explanatory Memorandum. |
| | | It is notable that the AER has not sought to enforce this formulation of the bidding rule in any public proceedings since its introduction, and the ACCC did not identify any bids or offers of concern in its Retail Electricity Prices Inquiry. If there was a significant concern, then it would be reasonable to expect the AER to have run a case, and for the ACCC to have identified specific issues in its report. | |
| 5 | Contracting order Sections 153W and 153X provide the Treasurer with broad powers to make a contracting order. | This is a significant power that would require the Treasurer to take the position of an electricity financial contract trader in order to apply, particularly in relation to a dynamic market. We are concerned about the unbounded nature of this power. There is a material risk that, used inappropriately, the power could cause significant detriment to the firm and distort the market, particularly | These provisions should be amended so that the Treasurer may apply to the Court for a contracting order. Before making an application to the Court under section 153W, the Treasurer must have made a " proposed contracting order", on a confidential basis, directing the |

| | | to the extent that the obligation to contract: may prevent a vertically-integrated firm from realising the efficiencies of having sufficient wholesale energy contracting arrangements for its own retail operations; requires the firm to contract on terms that are not commercial, having regard to the broader economic cycle—wholesale energy prices fluctuate over time, so requiring a firm to contract in a particular time period may damage the firm's ability to compete if they cannot make contracting decisions that take account of the economic cycle, including their own views about it; or inadvertently provides opportunities to other businesses to acquire electricity financial contracts below their market cost, on the basis that acquirer will on-sell them rather than use them as a hedge against retail risk. We are also concerned that placing this power in the hands of the Treasurer may not be appropriate, particularly to the extent to which this might be characterised as a form of judicial power. In the context of these reforms, it gives the Treasurer the power to punish a business by fundamentally changing the structure and commercial arrangements of that business. | relevant corporation to make offers to enter into electricity financial contracts. This must be confidential to the parties involved. In order for this power to be exercised appropriately by the Court, it will be essential to set out clear criteria / factors to which the Court must have regard when determining the price(s) in respect of electricity under the electricity financial contracts that must be offered. We have drafted a new section 153Y which sets out the process for the Treasurer to apply to the Court for a contracting order to be made, as well as the process for the Court to impose any such order. In addition, we recommend the insertion of a paragraph which makes clear that the provision does not require corporations to contract units that are mothballed or closed, or otherwise do anything that raises safety |
| | | | concerns. We have also amended section 153Y (now section 153Z) to enable the Treasurer, as well as the affected corporation, to apply to the Court for a variation or revocation of a contracting order. |
| | | | Consequently, all references to " an order of the Treasurer " should be substituted with " an order of the Court ", for example, in the definition of "contracting order" in section 153C. Consequently, section 153Z (enforcement of |

| 6 | Public warning notices Sections 153L and 153M provide the ACCC with the power to issue a public warning notice if it reasonably believes a corporation has engaged in prohibited conduct. | The broad power for the ACCC to issue a public warning notice could have very severe impacts on retailers, particularly in circumstances where the contravention does not even have to be proved. For example, even if the ACCC or Court determines that the corporation has not engaged in prohibited conduct after the ACCC has issued a public warning notice, the corporation would already have been significantly affected by the public warning notices. This provision also only provides corporations with less than 21 days to respond to a warning notice. This is not sufficient time for any corporation to identify the source of the conduct of concern, investigate what happened, whether there was a breach, seek legal advice etc. | Firstly, the ACCC should not have the power to issue any warning notices on a public basis, without the contraventions having been established/proved. Any warning notice should be made on a confidential basis. Secondly, only the Court should have the power to issue a public warning notice. These provisions should be amended to reflect the language of section 86D of the CCA which empowers the Court, on application by the ACCC, to make an adverse publicity order in relation to a corporation who has engaged in prohibited conduct. In addition, corporations should have 45 days, rather than 21 days, to respond to a warning notice. The ACCC should not be able to apply to the Court for a warning notice within 90 days of first giving the corporation notice of its intention to apply for a warning notice. |
| 7 | No Treasurer action notice Under section 153U, the ACCC must give the | Given the issues identified in relation to public warning notices above and our view that this power should be removed, it follows that it would not be reasonable to require the ACCC to publish a "no action notice". | If the proposed amendments in respect of public warning notices above are accepted, it follows that subsection 153U(3) should be deleted . |

| 8 | Threshold for ACCC issuing warning notice and prohibited conduct notices Sections 153L and 153M provide the ACCC with the power to issue a public warning notice if it reasonably believes a corporation has engaged in prohibited conduct. Similarly, section 153P allows the ACCC to issue a prohibited conduct notice. | "Reasonable belief" is a very low threshold for the ACCC to meet before issuing notices that could have significant and detrimental impacts on retailers. Such a threshold is typically a threshold for the ACCC to initiate an investigation and/or issue a section 155 notice (both typically confidential processes). The ACCC should be required to have more than reasonable belief, particularly given that the ACCC would have conducted an investigation and obtained further evidence of any likely prohibited conduct. | Given the potential consequences on retailers if the ACCC issues these notices, the ACCC should only be able to issue a warning notice or prohibited conduct notice if it is satisfied that the corporation has engaged, or is engaging in, the prohibited conduct. |
| 9 | Appeal rights The ACCC will have very broad powers to issue a prohibited conduct notice and give the Treasurer a prohibited conduct recommendation. | Given that this unfettered power to issue notices will significantly impact corporations and the market, we consider it would be appropriate to ensure that any such decisions may be the subject of review/appeal. | We have recommended the insertion of a new section 153VA which enables affected corporations to apply to the Tribunal for a review of a decision by the ACCC to issue/vary a prohibited conduct notice or give/vary a prohibited conduct recommendation, or vary/revoke a no Treasurer action notice. This provision will enable the Tribunal to review any such decision for error(s) of facts, incorrect or unreasonable exercise(s) of discretion, or any other specified ground. The Tribunal may affirm, vary or set aside |

| | | | substitution or remit the matter to the ACCC. |
| 10 | Transitional period Section 2 states the obligations will commence on the day the Act receives Royal Assent. | Given the significant implications of the amendments on the structure and commercial arrangements of corporations, and the desire of firms to fully prepare their businesses for compliance, we consider it would be necessary to provide firms with the necessary time to comply and ensure that their staff, processes and policies are all ready for the commencement of the obligations. This would involve considering and implementing guidelines published by the ACCC. It is important to recognise that the ACCC's guidelines will not be legally binding, and that regulated entities will need to form their own views about how to comply with the legislation. However, the ACCC's guidelines are an important part in informing regulated entities about the ACCC's compliance and enforcement approach. ACCC guidelines are common and serve an important compliance role. By way of example, the recent guidelines in relation to the DMO have assisted retailers in understanding how the industry code implementing the DMO will be interpreted and applied by the ACCC. | Given the significant and extensive nature of the proposed prohibitions, we consider it would be appropriate to implement a transition period of: for the retail pricing prohibited conduct (section 153E), 6 months from the date of publication of final ACCC guidelines that would apply; 3 months from the date of publication of ACCC guidelines that would apply. This will enable affected corporations to interpret and implement the necessary changes and educative programs. A longer transitional period is proposed for the retail pricing prohibited conduct given the potential interactions with the DMO/VDO and the obligations that retailers have under those regimes and also to allow retailers to comply with the bill and DMO/VDO without causing further consumer confusion arising from frequent changes to retail pricing. |
| 11 | Personal liability | The amendments to section 76 of the CCA set out in Schedule 2 of the Bill effectively mean that any person "involved in" a contravention of the above prohibitions is exposed to pecuniary | If personal liability was not intended, then this should be clarified by adding an express exclusion of liability consistent with |

| | penalties. This effectively imposes individuals to personal liability. It is not clear whether this intended, given that the provisions currently impose very broad and uncertain obligations that extend to all retailers and generators across Australia, irrespective of whether they are privately or government owned. The nature of the prohibited conduct means that a range of individuals may be involved in conduct alleged to breach the legislation, but it is unlikely that a single individual would be responsible for engaging in the conduct. | section 76(2) of the CCA. |

The nature of the prohibited conduct means that a range of individuals may be involved in conduct alleged to breach the legislation, but it is unlikely that a single individual would be responsible for engaging in the conduct. | |
| | The prospect of individual liability for individual traders, pricing analysts and relatively junior employees could be unfairly impacted. In circumstances where the provisions are so broad and uncertain and have the potential to impact daily decision making that is currently done at relatively junior levels of the private and public organisations, individual liability should not be considered appropriate. | |
| Status of AER instruments | The amendments introducing the DMO expressly provide for AER instruments (including the pricing instruments) to be disallowed instruments. However, the amendments to Schedule 2 reverse the position, making them non-disallowable. The Explanatory Memorandum indicates that AER's instrument making power is to introduce a price determination that will effectively set the reference price under the DMO. The power is currently not subject to any criteria, leaving considerable discretion to the AER. It would be preferable for the AER to have specific criteria (and there is considerable precedent for this under the State pricing regimes that apply a cost-based model). | The legislation should be amended so that: the AER's instrument making power is clearly only a power to make price determinations for the DMO; before making a price determination, the AER should be required to make a decision, based on specific criteria, about the recommended price and that this should be subject to public consultation before being made final; and once the decision is made final, the AER should then be able to issue |

| 12 | AER information gathering The proposed amendment to section 44AH in Schedule 2 enables the AER to make legislative instruments. | This is a very broad power, which the Explanatory Memorandum suggested was necessary in order to enable the AER to obtain information to make price determinations. Given that the DMO and VDO have now been introduced via the industry code provisions in the CCA and via the Victorian Order, this power is no longer necessary. It should be noted that it is currently cast in terms that does not limit the legislative making power of the AER in any way. | The information gathering powers only apply in respect of the DMO and VDO, and it should also include a framework and principles the AER must have regard to before exercising those powers. |

| # | Requested change | Type of change | Reasons |
|----|--|----------------------|---|
| 1. | Remove section 153E (retail pricing prohibition). | Substantive | Section 153E should be entirely removed, and the efficacy of the DMO Code and VDO Order should be reviewed before any more intrusive regulation is implemented. |
| 2. | Amend section 153E to clarify that "sustained and substantial reduction in the underling cost of procuring electricity" would constitute an objective test based on the benchmark costs of a prudent and efficient standalone new entrant retailer. | Technical/clarifying | This is consistent with the intention expressed in the Explanatory Memorandum, for example, see paragraph 2.28. |
| 3. | Amend section 153E to clarify that the wholesale energy cost component should be assessed with reference to a range of commercially legitimate risk management strategies and observable forward market prices. | Technical/clarifying | This reflects how procurement works. Retailers set prices based on forecast spot market prices, and necessarily need to hedge against risk. |
| 4. | Amend section 153E to clarify that "reasonable adjustments" allow a retailer to take into account retailer-specific factors, including margin, changes in other costs, the need to "smooth out" price changes, the timing of past and future price changes. | Technical/clarifying | This reflects how procurement works. Retailers set prices based on forecast spot market prices, and necessarily need to hedge against risk. |
| 5. | Amend section 153E to introduce a "materiality" threshold so that "sustained" and "substantial" can be easily identified and applied, both for retailers and the ACCC. | Technical/clarifying | This will make section 153E easier for retailers and the ACCC to identify whether a reduction in the underlying cost of procuring electricity is "sustained and substantial" and, accordingly, provides more clarity regarding what this section is intended to capture. |
| 6. | Amend section 153E to ensure that default offers made in accordance with the DMO, VDO or any other legislation is exempt (particularly given that retailers may legitimately choose to price at the default offer level). | Technical/clarifying | This ensures the bill does not operate to capture conduct that is otherwise consistent with the DMO, VDO or any other legislation (particularly given that retailers may legitimately choose to price at the default offer level). |

ANNEXURE – CLASSIFICATION OF PROPOSED CHANGES

| # | Requested change | Type of change | Reasons |
|-----|---|----------------------|---|
| 7. | Amend section 153E to clarify that the underlying costs of procuring electricity is a forward looking, not backward looking, assessment to reflect industry practice. | Technical/clarifying | This reflects how procurement works. Retailers set prices based on forecast spot market prices, and necessarily need to hedge against risk. |
| 8. | Further consideration should be given to aligning the proposed processes in section 153E so that the ACCC could just rely on the AER's setting of the DMO. | Technical/clarifying | This ensures consistency with the DMO and the AER is best placed to determine the appropriate threshold. |
| 9. | Remove section 153ZA (divestment). | Substantive | The divestiture order powers should be removed entirely. |
| 10. | Section 153ZA should be amended to: allow a court to impose a less intrusive order (such as requiring functional separation or ring-fencing, pecuniary penalties, or injunctions) instead of proceeding directly to divestiture where it considers divestiture is not proportionate; the period for selling an asset should not be limited to 12 months, but should instead be assessed by the court on the evidence; the purchaser should be required to operate the generation plant; there should be a mechanism for revoking the order where there is no buyer for fair value; and the impact on the corporation should be taken into account. | Substantive | A range of amendments should be implemented to ensure procedural fairness and clear criteria, recognising that court-order divestiture be used "as a last resort in the most exceptional circumstances where other responseswould not sufficiently address the alleged prohibited conduct" (paragraph 5.7 of the Explanatory Memorandum – see also paragraphs 8.53 and 8.92). |
| 11. | Remove section 153F (prohibited conduct – financial contract market). | Substantive | Section 153F as currently drafted could be construed as having a very broad application, which is clearly not intended, particularly taking into account paragraph 2.49 of the Explanatory Memorandum. |

| # | Requested change | Type of change | Reasons It is preferable that section 153F be removed and, instead, a misuse of market power contrary to section 46 be subject to the contracting order remedy (as amended). |
|-----|--|----------------------|---|
| 12. | If section 153F is retained, it should also be limited to electricity financial contracts offered to third party retailers supplying small customers. In particular, the following conduct should not constitute a breach: conduct that would require a generator to breach an existing contract or compromise the ability to meet those requirements; a failure to offer contracts where there are physical or regulatory limitations in doing so; where conduct is to comply with legislation (including market liquidity or retailer reliability obligations); conduct to give effect to genuine risk strategies (including counterparty risk), maintenance and outage planning and management, or managing safety; or where the conduct is to manage a vertically-integrated generator/retailer's own risk position. | Technical/clarifying | These proposed amendments reflect the purpose of this prohibition, which is to ensure that retailers seek financial contracts to hedge risk in supplying small customers, and not more broadly. |
| 13. | Insert a new paragraph in section 153F which makes clear that the provision does not require corporations to contract units that are mothballed or closed, or otherwise do anything that raises legitimate operational or safety concerns. | Technical/clarifying | This makes clear that section 153F does not operate to require contracting off units that have been legitimately notified for mothballing or closure, and will not operate in a manner that interferes with legitimate operational concerns in respect of assets, such as reliability, maintenance requirements and safe operation. |

| | both prohibitions should be limited to the National Electricity Market and should incorporate the language of paragraph 2.101 from the Explanatory Memorandum. | | |
| 16. | If sections 153G and 153H are retained, the following subsection should be included in both sections 153G and 153H: "Nothing in this section prohibits bidding conduct that is consistent with the design of, and rules regulating, the relevant electricity spot market and in the ordinary course of business." | Technical/clarifying | This ensures the design of the electricity spot market must be considered for the purposes of determining whether a corporation has contravened sections 153G or 153H. |

This must be confidential to the parties involved. | | |
| | In order for this power to be exercised appropriately by the Court, it will be essential to set out clear criteria / factors to which the Court must have regard when determining the price(s) in respect of electricity under the electricity financial contracts that must be offered. | | |
| | Insert a paragraph which makes clear that the provision does not require corporations to contract units that are mothballed or closed, or otherwise do anything that raises safety concerns. | | |
| | • Amend section 153Y (now section 153Z) to enable the Treasurer, as well as the affected corporation, to apply to the Court for a variation or revocation of a contracting order. | | |

| 21. | Amend sections 153L and 1653M so that the ACCC can only issue a warning notice if it is "satisfied" (rather than "has a reasonable belief") that the corporation has engaged, or is engaging in, the prohibited conduct. | Substantive | The ACCC should be required to have more than a "reasonable belief" that the corporation has engaged in the prohibited conduct before issuing a warning notice, particularly given that the ACCC would have conducted an investigation and obtained further evidence of any likely prohibited conduct. |

| 24. | Add an express exclusion of liability consistent with section 76(2) of the CCA. | Technical/clarifying | This clarifies that individuals will not be personally liable. The prospect of individual liability for individual traders, pricing analysts and relatively junior employees could be unfairly impacted. |
